A Genealogy of the

Butcher Family

of Eastern Kentucky

The following information was published in the Floyd Countain in 7 consecutive issues over a two year period. Much of this information has already appeared in Wells Family books. However, since the combined information for the Butcher Family was available, we decided to present it to our family members.

Keep in mind that most of this information is data passed on from various sources, and there is always a possibility that some of it may be inaccurate. If you find something that is not accurate, please notify me in writing, so that corrections can be made.

Many people contributed to this publication, but a special thanks goes to John Britton Wells III and Charles Wells. With out their information, this report would not be possible. Keep in mind this publication was intended for genealogy only. It would have been impossible to include history of the various individuals mentioned in such limited space available.

The Butcher Family

by Bobby W. Wells

The Butcher family of Eastern Kentucky are almost all descendants of Jacob Butcher, who came to Johnson County in the winter of 1844-1845. Although this article is about Jacob's family, it is important to know his family history, and the best source of this history was from John Britton Wells III's collection of Butcher information. John's presented this Butcher Family Pamphlet to his family for Christmas in 1992. He has given me permission to use any or all of his information. It was so good, that I thought it would not do John justice if we did not use all of it. Thanks John, you are a great researcher.

From Saarland to Greasy Creek

(The Metzger/Butcher Story)

By John Britton Wells III

Saarland, one of the smallest of the states, or Lander, that make up the Federal Republic of Germany, is best known for its extensive deposits of coal, which have been the source of political contention for over a thousand years. Located on the border with France, the state has alternated between French and German control with bewildering frequency over the centuries, and its culture contains a heritage from both nations. It was not until June 7, 1959, that the region finally achieved its present status as the tenth "land" of the Federal Republic.

Saarland is also the ancestral home of the Butcher family of Johnson County, Kentucky. Translated into German as "METZGER", the family name traces its roots to the Celts and Germanic Franks who were the first inhabitants of the area. The earliest identifiable progenitor of the family is Johann Jacob Metzger who lived in the tiny village of Jettenback in Saarland during the last half of the 17th century. His son, Johann Philip Metzger, born in 1669, was a cooper, or barrellmaker, by trade who lived variously in Steinbach, Welschbach, and Mainzweiler, three small villages in southern Saarland. Johann Philip married on January 16, 1696, to Anna Catharina Thom, the daughter of Hans Thom of Welschbach. The name of the village hints of the ethnic diversity of the area. Literally translated, "Welschbach" means "stream where the French-speakers live".

Johann Philip Metzger had at least two sons, Georg Valentin and Johann Adam, both born in Mainzweiler. Our ancestor, Georg Valentin, born on April 19, 1715, and also a cooper, made his home in Nieder-Linxweiler, a market town located between St.

Wendel and Ottweiler, about 15 kilometers northeast of Saarbrücken and the French border. The register of the local Lutheran parish contains many family entries including the marriage of Georg Valentin on December 6, 1739, to Maria Elisabeth Keiffert, the daughter of Johann Wilhelm Keiffert of Nieder-Linxweiler. The church register also includes the birth records of their first two children, Anna Barbara in 1743, and Louisa in 1746.

Compared to most Germans of that time, Georg Valentin Metzger was relatively affluent. An independent tradesman who owned his own home, he was a respected member of the business community in Nieder-Linxweiler. By 1747, his shop was located in the center of the business district of the town. However, in spite of his economic status, it was becoming increasingly difficult to live in the region. Saarland, in addition to being an economic/military prize, had become a religious battleground. Soon after Martin Luther made his initial protest against the abuses of the Roman Catholic Church, a majority of the inhabitants of the hills of eastern Saarland embraced this new "protestant" faith. In Nieder-Linxweiler, over 90% of the adult churchmen identified with the Lutheran Church. However, even today Saarland as a whole remains over 70% Roman Catholic, and the Lutherans suffered terrific persecution. Continued discrimination led many protestants to flee their homes for safer conditions elsewhere.

As early as 1680, protestant leaders were encouraging the faithful to come to the American colony of Pennsylvania. Rev. Henry Melchoir Muehlenberg, patriarch of the Lutheran Church, called on his brothers to cross the Atlantic and "make use of the freedom which we enjoy here undisturbed in matters of religion". During the next hundred years, hundreds of thousands of German protestants took him up on his offer. By 1749, they were arriving at the rate of twenty-two ships and seven thousand settlers a year. On March 21, 1749, Georg Valentin Metzger, his wife and two daughters were granted their manumission for 30 florins and left Nieder-Linxweiler soon thereafter for the port city of Rotterdam, Holland.

The journey to America fell into three parts. The first part, and by no means the easiest, was the journey down the Rhine River to Rotterdam. The trip took fully half a year because all Rhine boats had to pass 26 customs houses, at all of which the ships were examined. Local merchants purposely inflated food prices, so that by the time the settlers reached Rotterdam most of their meager funds had been depleted. In Rotterdam, there was an additional wait of five to six weeks before the boat was ready to sail, another costly delay.

The second stage of the trip was from Rotterdam to one of the English ports. Most of the ships called at Cowes, on the Isle of Wight where they waited again, this time for favorable winds to carry them across the Atlantic.

The third stage of the journey, or the ocean voyage proper, was marked by suffering and hardship. The passengers being packed densely, like herrings, without proper food and water, were subject to all sorts of diseases, such as dysentery, scurvy, typhoid and smallpox. The terrors of disease were much aggravated by frequent storms through which ships and passengers had to pass. One passenger described the waves as "like mountains one above the other". This misery lasted typically up to twelve weeks before Philadelphia was reached. Even with the best winds the voyage lasted seven weeks.

Georg Valentin Metzger and his family arrived in America during the fall of 1749, disembarking from the ship "Rachel" somewhere along the coast of Delaware Bay in Delaware or New Jersey. The ship had been denied entry at Philadelphia because of "too much sickness" on board. Rather than suffer a delay in returning to Europe, the captain dropped off his passengers at a secluded spot on the bay, far from the rules and regulations of Philadelphia. Georg Valentin and his family settled almost immediately in Frederick County, Maryland, probably because several other Saarland families had already established themselves in that area's growing German community. The earliest surviving record of his presence in Frederick County is a June 1750 court case against Nicholas Bundruck for the collection of an L11 debt. Bundruck was a native of Kelnsteinhausen, which is about 30 kilometers southeast of Niederlinxweiler. On June 19, 1752, and November 1, 1753, Metzger purchased two tracts of land in Frederick County, both on Ballenger's Creek, and established himself as a leader in the Frederick Evangelical Lutheran Church.

Surprisingly, he did not remain in Frederick County. Following a heavy German migration to the Shenandoah Valley in Virginia, he moved his family to Augusta County, sometime before 1759. On February 8, 1759, in Augusta County, he was included as one of the purchasers of the estate of John Vinegard, deceased. In the bill of sale, he gave his name as "Valentine Butcher". This is the first recorded instance of the Americanization of the Metzger name. However, later in the same year, on December 9th, as a purchaser of the estate of John Colley, he was referred to as Valentine "Mitsker", one of the many phonetic misspellings of the Metzger name that were to be used in ensuing years.

In November 1761, Valentine "Matchier" bought 275 acres from Peter Miller, on Nelson's Run, a branch of the Shenandoah River near the town of Bridgewater. During this time the family attended the Peaked Mountain Church at McGayheysville, Virginia, a joint German Reformed and Lutheran congregation. On March 2, 1762, George Valentine's oldest daughter, Anna Barbara, was married there to Jacob Kropf (Cropp). However, George Valentine's odyssey was not yet over. In 1768, he sold the Nelson's Run farm and moved once again, this time to the South Branch area of the present Pendleton County, West Virginia. In December 1769, he claimed 130 acres on South Mill Creek, but the patent was not completed until June 1772. In the initial survey, Valentine Butcher's name was given as "Metscaw", while the final patent listed him both as "Butcher" and "Mittscow".

The winter of 1772-73 in the mountains of Virginia was one of the most severe during the colonial period in America. Heavy snows and extremely cold temperatures resulted in the deaths of many elderly residents of the area. Valentine Butcher died prior to March 16, 1773, because on that date his son Nicholas was granted letters of administration for his estate. It is assumed that our immigrant ancestor was buried somewhere on South Mill Creek, or at a nearby church cemetery, but the exact site is unknown.

After Valentine's death the family began to scatter throughout southwestern Virginia. His sons, Nicholas and Paulser, remained in the Pendleton County vicinity. But, Henry, William, and Jacob eventually moved south into Greenbrier and Botetourt counties. William Butcher, Valentine's third son, was born about 1754, either in Frederick County, Maryland, or Augusta County, Virginia. Less than a year after his father's death, in 1774, as William "Massicer", he surveyed 70 acres on the west side of the Greenbrier River in Greenbrier County. This land was located north of the present town of Lewisburg, West Virginia, at "Great Levels" in the Spring Creek community.

Any plans that William Butcher had for starting a family on his new farm were put on hold by the outbreak of the American Revolutionary War. Even the isolated settlements on the frontier of western Virginia played an important role in the struggle for American independence. Almost from the beginning of hostilities, British emissaries persuaded the Shawnees and other local tribes to join forces against the white Americans who threatened to take their ancestral hunting and fishing grounds. The people of Greenbrier County were subject to repeated Indian raids and, at times, were forced to spend months in strategically located blockhouses. According to the Virginia Revolutionary pension application of John Robinson, William Butcher enlisted in Captain Andrew Hamilton's Company of the Greenbrier County Militia and served periodically from 1776 until 1783. Most of Butcher's service was against the Indians on the New, Kanawha, and Cumberland rivers, with one major foray into central Kentucky as far as McAfee Station. Butcher was also a participant in what has been called "the strongest Indian attack experienced in western Virginia". In May 1778, a force of more than two hundred Shawnees was sent against Donnally's Fort in Greenbrier County. This strong blockhouse, consisting of a double log house, two stories high, surrounded by a stockade, was built in 1772 by Andrew Donnally about ten miles north of Lewisburg, adjacent to William Butcher's survey. According to an account published in Oren F. Morton's A History of Monroe County, West Virginia, when news of an impending attack came, only five men were in the blockhouse. Word was at once sent out and about twenty men were collected with their families. The next morning before daylight, the attack began. The first wave was beaten back with seven Indians killed and only one white casualty. During a second assault the attackers attempted first to break down the door and then to "fire the house from under the floor". About four o'clock in the after-noon, a relief party, including William Butcher, under the command of Captain Andrew Hamilton arrived from Lewisburg and reached the fort by crawling undetected through a field of rye. In spite of the reinforcements, the Indians kept up the fight until dark. Early the next morning, Captain Hamilton led William Butcher and the rest of his company out of the fort in pursuit of the attackers who fled before them. A total of four whites and seventeen Indians were killed in the fight which is now known as the "Battle of Donnally's Fort".

Sporadic raids continued in Greenbrier County through 1785 and the militia kept a nervous watch on the western frontier until the final peace was signed. With order restored and military service behind him, William Butcher married in Greenbrier County on January 17, 1785, to Margaret Donnally, the niece of Andrew Donnally "of Donnally's Fort". Although a newlywed, William Butcher had achieved a degree of prosperity, at least by frontier standards. The 1786 Greenbrier County tax list showed him owning ten cattle and five horses. In 1789, his younger brother, Henry, joined him in Greenbrier County and seems to have taken over the operation of his farm. In 1791, William moved his family to adjacent Botetourt County where he settled next to his other younger brother, Jacob Butcher. Jacob had moved to Botetourt County from Hampshire County just after his marriage in 1788.

It is thought that William moved once again just after the 1810 census was taken. The 1820 census records a William Butcher living in Cabell County, Virginia, with one adult son, Samuel. It is presumed that he died there, although one source indicates that he moved on to Kentucky prior to his death. William and Margaret Butcher had at least seven children with such familiar Butcher first names as John, William, Jacob, Hannah, Mary, and Elizabeth. The only known child whose name is not repeated with regularity in our branch of the family is Samuel. Jacob, our ancestor, was born about 1786 in Greenbrier County, Virginia. The first separate record for Jacob is a payment for the killing of a wolf in Tazewell County, Virginia, in 1811. $2.08 was paid to Jacob "Metscer" and William "Mitsker" served as a witness. No doubt, this reference is for William Butcher and his son Jacob. It appears that when William Butcher moved his family on to Cabell County, Jacob remained in Tazewell County, finding employment as a laborer on the farm of Mrs. Christina Harman, the widow of Henry Harman, Jr. Harman, who died in 1809, was a prominent local leader also of German descent. His farm, located about four miles northeast of the town of Tazewell, was used as Tazewell County's first courthouse and served as the muster grounds for the local militia company. It was also significant geographically as a natural stopping place for the early settlers of southwestern Virginia and eastern Kentucky. The Bluestone River flowed northward from the farm to form an ancient trail from the New and Greenbrier River valleys, while the headwaters of the Clinch River preceded from the farm southward into Russell and Lee counties, providing convenient access to that region.

The association with the Harman family must have been very important to Jacob Butcher because he named one of his sons Henry (Henderson) Harman and continued to live with the family until his marriage on January 1, 1812, to Hannah Beverly, the daughter of Elijah and Mary (Freeman) Beverly. At that point Jacob moved to the Beverly place located nearby at Dial Rock at the western end of East River Mountain, also in Tazewell County. Since his marriage in Orange County, North Carolina, in 1787, Elijah Beverly lived in five different localities in Virginia and North Carolina, so it was not surprising that he did not remain in Tazewell County for long. According to the tax records of Russell County, Virginia, Beverly purchased a small farm in 1814 located near Guest's Mountain on the Guest River, a tributary of the Clinch River. Today the site is just off Virginia State Route #64, about 2.5 miles west of the town of Coeburn, in Wise County. Jacob Butcher followed his father-in-law to what was then Russell County and built a small log cabin on the Beverly farm, "on the road to Cranes Nest Station". He lived there for over thirty years until he moved to Kentucky in 1844, and all but one of his children were born in the little cabin.

Although Russell County, Virginia, was far from any major population center, the repercussions of international political decisions penetrated the isolated mountains, even to Jacob Butcher's Guest's Mountain cabin. In 1812, the United States was again at war with Great Britain and the inhabitants of western Virginia were anxious to do their part for the young republic. Militia companies were organized in every mountain community and all males of military age were required to join. Initially, Jacob Butcher affiliated with the 112th Regiment of Virginia Militia in Tazewell County, but when he moved to Russell County he became a member of Captain Kindrick's Company of the 72nd Regiment. He was listed as "present for service in the War of 1812" on muster rolls as late as February 5, 1815.

Jacob and Hannah (Beverly) Butcher had at least three daughters between 1812 and 1820: Sarah Margaret, Judah (Judy), and Mary. Although no record survives, it appears that his wife Hannah died in 1821, and Jacob remarried soon afterward to Arta Dotson, the daughter of Simon and Phoebe (Hollingsworth) Dotson. Arta was the mother of Jacob's remaining children: James, William, Phoebe, Elizabeth, Nancy, Hanna(h), and Henderson (Henry) Harman. Although remarried, Jacob continued to live on the Beverly property, an insecure arrangement at best. His meager income as a subsistence farmer was supplemented only by an occasional bounty from the county for a wolf skin and a few dollars from his appointment in 1839 as road surveyor from "the Cranes Nest Station to Reuben Steels farm on Guest Mountains." By 1840, several of his children were adults and their prospects in Russell County were bleak.

A few of Jacob Butcher's neighbors had already moved across Pound Gap into the mountains of Kentucky, attracted by large tracts of vacant land still available for new settlement. At least two of Jacob's children preceded their father to Kentucky. His 18 year old daughter Judah married in Floyd County, Kentucky, in 1837 to Edward (Edmund) R. Webb, a Kentucky native. Just over a year later, on January 15, 1839, his third daughter, 19 year old Mary united with William Green Wells, also in Floyd County. Of his three children by Hannah Beverly, only Sarah Margaret did not come to Kentucky. She married in 1840 to Charles C. Addington, a resident of Scott County, and remained in Virginia.

Both William Green Wells and Edward R. Webb received patents for several hundred acres of vacant land near the head of Daniels Creek in what is now Johnson County, Kentucky, and sent back word to their father-in-law to bring the rest of the family to their new Kentucky home. Finally, during the winter of 1844-45, Jacob left his native state accompanied by his son, William, and the rest of the younger children. The 1845 tax list for Johnson County reflected the impoverished condition of the family. The elder Butcher's possessions included one horse, but no land, no livestock, and no jewelry of any kind, for a total value of only $40. However, Jacob's sons were quick to take advantage of the opportunity to acquire land. James Butcher, who followed his father to Kentucky in 1846, surveyed the first patent for the family in 1848, and was granted 50 acres near the mouth of Pigeon Roost Fork of Greasy Creek. He built a small log house at the junction of the two water courses and set about to establish a comfortable farm. By 1870, his holdings had increased to over one thousand acres of land, 10 hogs, 26 cattle, and an annual cash crop of over 800 bushels of wheat. He also gained status in the local community, serving as a road surveyor and constable. In partnership with Isaac Hicks, James also developed a lucrative timber business, hauling oak and poplar logs from Bob's Branch to the Big Sandy River. From there the logs were floated down the river to market in Catlettsburg.

His brother, William Butcher, remained on Daniels Creek and secured several land grants of his own. By 1865, he owned 550 acres on "Brushy Fork at the head of Daniels Creek" and also served as a constable and road surveyor. Jacob and Arta (Dotson) Butcher lived with William until 1858 when they moved to Greasy Creek. In that year, William Green Wells traded his Daniels Creek holdings for property located adjacent to James Butcher, and Greenville Ward, another son-in-law of Jacob, established his residence nearby. So, when Jacob Butcher moved to "the mouth of Pigeon", a large family enclave was formed. The migration was completed in 1872 when William Butcher purchased 250 acres on Two Mile Creek, another tributary of Greasy Creek.

The War Between the States in East Kentucky was a tragic period of division, destruction, and death. Unlike the inhabitants of areas farther to the north and south, the mountain people were deeply divided politically, pitting brother against brother, family against family, and friend against friend. Local political concerns and personal animosities instead of national issues determined affiliations. It was common practice in the mountains to refer to the combatants as "Democrats" and "Republicans" rather than as "Yankees" and "Confederates". The Butcher family was torn apart by the war with family members fighting for both sides and even switching allegiances from time to time. Of Jacob's sons, only William and Henderson Harman served in regular military units. William, a strong Unionist, enlisted as a private in Company C of the 65th Kentucky Union Militia and was mustered into active service on May 21, 1864, for one month against Confederate General John Hunt Morgan. Henderson Harman Butcher also served in the 65th Kentucky Union Militia, as a private in Company B. However, sometime after June 21, 1864, he switched sides and enlisted in Company B of Diamond's 10th Kentucky Confederate Cavalry. This regiment was part of Gen. John Hunt Morgan's famous cavalry command and was present when the general was murdered at Greeneville, Tennessee, on September 4, 1864. Henderson was captured in Lawrence County, Kentucky, on April 15, 1865, and was taken to Louisa where he took the Oath of Allegiance to the United States. The remaining brother, James, did not serve in either army, but was known to be a southern sympathizer. Several stories survive which describe his activities as a local "guerrilla" warrior. These activities may have led to his decision to move to Floyd County in 1872.

Several of Jacob Butcher's sons-in-law and grandsons also fought in the bloody conflict. Greenville Ward, the husband of Hannah Butcher, first served for the Union as a corporal in Company B of the 65th Kentucky Militia, but later joined Company B of Diamond's 10th Kentucky Confederate Cavalry with which he remained until the war's end. After the war, he named his son "John Hunt Morgan" Ward in honor of his dashing commanding officer. Mary Butcher's spouse, William Green Wells, also fought for the South. Enlisting as a private in Company E of the 54th Virginia Infantry, he soon rose to the rank of captain and recruited his own company of Kentucky Confederate Partisan Rangers, mostly from the Greasy Creek area. He finally surrendered to Federal authorities at Charleston, West Virginia, over two months after Lee's surrender, on June 12, 1865. Three of the sons of Captain Wells followed their father into the Confederate service, but one son, M.L.K. Wells, deserted from the Confederate Army and enlisted in the 45th Kentucky Union Infantry. Sarah Margaret Butcher Addington's son, Henry E. Addington, fought with the Scott County (Virginia) Confederate Militia, while Judah Butcher Webb's son, James Apperson Webb, joined the 39th Kentucky Union Infantry. Ironically, on October 2, 1864, at the Battle of Saltville, Virginia, Corporal James Apperson Webb of the 39th Kentucky Union Infantry faced two of his uncles, privates Henderson Harman Butcher and Greenville Ward, both with Company B of Diamond's 10th Kentucky Confederate Cavalry. Fortunately, all three survived unharmed.

The political divisions of the war carried over into the post-war years and continue to divide the family, at least politically. Confederate veterans William Green Wells, Henderson Harman Butcher, and Greenville Ward became strong advocates of the Democratic Party, while Union soldiers William Butcher, James Apperson Webb, and M.L.K. Wells aligned with the Republicans. Since James Butcher's family moved to Floyd County, and Henderson Harman Butcher's male descendants either died or moved out of the area, only the descendants of Union veteran William Butcher continue the family name in Johnson County. As a result, in 1995 over 68% of Johnson County's registered voters by the name of Butcher adhere to the Republican standard, over 130 years after the Civil War caused the initial polarization.

The descendants of Jacob Butcher, whether by the name of Butcher, Addington, Webb, Ward, Spears, or Wells, have continued to lead Johnson County in almost every area of endeavor. The family has provided a disproportionate share of the county's political leaders, lawyers, educators, sports figures, and businessmen. John W. Butcher served as county judge and as a United Baptist Minister. Donis Butcher carried the name into the ranks of professional sports. George W. Butcher is still recognized as Johnson County's greatest teacher. Loretta Lynn, a Butcher descendant, made "Butcher Holler" world famous in song. As we give thanks for our many blessings this Christmas season, pause for a moment to remember that fateful day over 243 years ago, when Georg Valentin Metzger decided to leave his native land to seek freedom for himself and his descendants in the new world they called "AMERICA".

Our personal connection to the Butcher family comes from Mary Butcher, the wife of William Green Wells. Their son, Charles Jefferson Wells, born on March 19, 1856, was our great grandfather. He married on August 16, 1877, to Margaret Jane Arrowood. Their youngest son was John Britton Wells, Sr., born on October 22, 1880. He had one brother, Jacob Green Wells, who was named for his great grandfather, Jacob Butcher. John Britton Wells, Sr. married Jennie Ward on October 9, 1902, and had five children, one of whom is John Britton Wells, Jr., alias "J.B.2", the patriarch of our little branch of the family.

Merry Christmas 1992
John Britton Wells III

Again I am grateful for this information from John. He has given us a great beginning. As we can see from John's work, Jacob Butcher was the son of William and Margaret Donnally Metzger (Butcher), the grand son of Georg Valentin and Maria Elisabeth Kieppert Metzger, the great grand son of Johann Philip and Anna Catherina Thom Metzger, and the great great grand son of Johann Jacob Metzger. The following information will begin with Jacob Butcher, and bring the family forward.
